3. Will Grayson be subject to a one-time, up-front fee of 25 basis points, which is added to the conversion fee when switching from fixed to variable rates?

6. Provide the following:

b. The variable long-term interest rate available October 22, 1993.

c. The variable long-term interest rate established for the two loans.

7. a. Provide an Internal Rate of Return Analysis using the CFC model. The analysis should reflect the following three alternatives:

(2) The variable rate as of October 22, 1993 increasing .25 percent each quarter beginning the third quarter.

(3) A fixed rate that would be near the break-even point.

b. If the currently available long-term interest rate is different than the October 22, 1993 interest rate, provide the three analyses using the current long-term interest rate and explain which analyses are applicable to Grayson's proposed conversion.
